FISHKILL LANDING, April 15.—The capture of Patrick McGuire, the ring-leader of the five insane criminais who escaped from the Matteawan Asylum Wednesday night, and Michael O'Donnell, one of his companions, has renewed the hopes of the asylum authorities that Perry, the train robber, will soon also be behind from bars again. It is admitted, however, that Perry is the most cunning of the five and that he is likely to fight desperately if corpered.

the Newburg and Dutchess Railroad, about forty miles northeast of Mattea-wan.

He stayed there all night, and Sunday morning while looking along the railroad track he saw a man's head extending through the door of a box car. He ran along the track to investigate, and Mc-quire jumped from the car and ran. A moment later O'Donnell stepped to the car door and came face to face with a Coyle. He was very weak, and the keeper had no trouble in taking him to the depot, where he was handcuffed and left as a prisoner with some boys.

Coyle then started after McGuire, who had a quarter of a mile the start. The Chase continued into a chump of woods, McGuire ignoring Coyle's commands to stop and shots from the latter's revolver. Finally Coyle overtook McGuire and the fucitive gave up.

Supt. Alison of the asylum, found out from McGuire that the spoons from which he made the cell door keys were found in a pill of rubbish back of the sink in the isolation building. The rest of his story agrees with that told by Quigley. He claimed that since escaping he had not seen Perry, and that he had been simply wandering around and getting nothing to eat but water creeses.

There is a report here that Perry has been seen in Troy. This and other rumors are being investigated.

INSPECTOR ITLAUGHLIN AND HIS COUNSEL BEFORE THE BAR THIS AFTERNOON.

CLEVELAND ON THE MONEY QUESTION.

"Disguise It as We May, the Line of Battle Is Drawn Between the Forces of Safe Currency and Those of Silver Mono-Metallism."

EXECUTIVE MANSION. WASHINGTON, D. C., April 13, 1895.

"Gentlemen: I am much gratified by the exceedingly kind and complimentary invitation you have tendered me on behalf of many citizens of Chicago to be their guest at a gathering in the interest of sound money and wholesome financial doctrine. "My attachment to this cause is so great and I know so well the hospitality and kindness of the people of Chicago that my personal inclination is strongly in favor of accepting your flattering invitation, but my judgment and my estimate of the proprieties of my official place oblige me to forego the enjoyment of participating in the occasion you contemplate.

"I hope, however, the event will mark the beginning of an earnest and agcressive effort to disseminate among the people safe and prudent financial ideas. Nothing more important can engage the attention of patriotic citizens, because nothing is so vital to the welfare of our fellow-countrymen and to the strength, prosperity and honor of our nation. "The situation confronting us demands that those who appreciate the importance of this subject and those who ought to be the first to see impending danger should no longer remain indifferent or over-confident.

danger should no longer remain indifferent or over-confident.

"If the sound-money sentiment abroad in the land is to save us from mischief and disaster, it must be crystallized and combined and made immediately active. It is dangerous to overlook the fact that a vast number of our people, with scant opportunity thus far to examine the question in all its aspects, have nevertheless been ingeniously pressed with specious suggestions, which in this time of misfortune and depression, find willing listeners prepared to give cred-Philip Schneider Foreman of the ence to any scheme which is plausibly presented as a remedy for their unfortu-

"What is now needed more than anything else is a plain and simple presentation of the argument in favor of sound money. In other words, it is a time for the American people to reason together as members of a great nation which can promise them a continuance of protection and safety only so long as its solvency is unsuspected, its honor unsulled and the soundness of its maney un-questioned. These things are ill-exchanged for the illusions of a debased currency, and the groundless hope of advantages to be gained by a disregard of our financial credit and commercial standing among the nations of the world. "If our people were isolated from all others, and if the question f our currency could be treated without regard to our relations to other countries, its character would be a matter of comparatively little importance. If the Amerlean people were only concerned in the maintenance of their physical life, among themselves, they might return to the old days of barter, and in this primitive manner acquire from each other the materials to supply the wants of their existence. But if American civilization were satisfied with this, it would abjectly fail in its high and noble mission.

"In these restless days the farmer is templyd by the assurance that though our currency may be debased, redundant and uncertain, such a situation will improve the price of his products. Let us remind him that he must buy as well as sell; that his dreams of plenty are shaded by the certainty that if the price Laughlin charge him with bribery and of things he has to sell are nominally enhanced, the cost of things he must buy will not remain stationary; that the better prices which cheap money proclaims are unsubstantial and elusive, and that even if they were rest and palpable, he

"It ought not be difficult to convince the wage-earner that if there were bene its arising from a degenerated currency they would reach him least of all and last of all. In an unhealthy stimulation of prices an increased cost of all the needs of his home must long be his portion, while he is at the same time vexed with vanishing visions of increased wages and an easier lot. The pages of hisory and experience are full of this lesson. "An insidious attempt is made to create a prejudice against the advocates of a safe and sound currency by the insinuation, more or less directly made, that they belong to financial and business classes, and are, therefore, not only out of sympathy with the common people of the land, but for selfish and wicked purposes are willing to sacrifice the interests of those outside their circle.

"I believe that capital and wealth, through combination and other means sometimes gain an undue advantage; and it must be conceded that the maintenance of a sound currency may, in a sense, be invested with a greater or ess importance to individuals, according to their condition and circumstances.

"It is, however, only a difference in degree, since it is utterly impossible tha whether dwelling in a centre of finance and commerce or in a remote corner our domain, can be readily benefited by a financial scheme not alike beneficial versal interest in the safe character and staple value of the currency of the "In our relation to this question, we are all in business, for we all buy and sell; so we all have to do with financial operations, for we all earn money and spend it. We cannot escape our interdependence. Merchants and dealers are in every neighborhood, and each has its shops and manufactories. Wherever the wants of man exist business and finance in some degree are found, related in one direction to those whose wants they supply and in another to the more extensive business and finance to which they are tributary. A fluctuation in prices at the seaboard is known the same day or hour in the remotest hamlet. The discredit or depreciation in the financial centres of any form of money in the hands of the people is a signal of immediate loss everywhere.

"If reckless discontent and wild experiment should sweep our currency from its safe support the most defenseless of all who suffer in that time of distress and national discredit will be the poor, as they reckon the loss in their scanty support, and the laborer or workingman, as he sees the money he has received from his toll shrink and shrivel in his hand when he tenders it for the necessaries to supply his humble home.

"Disguise it as we may, the line of battle is drawn between the forces of safe currency and those of silver monometallism.
"I will not believe that if our people are afforded an intelligent opportunity for sober second thought they will sanction schemes that, however cloaked, mean disaster and confusion, nor will they consent, by undermining the four-dation of a safe currency, to endanger the beneficent character and purposes of their Government, Yours very truly, GROVER CLEVELAND."

MANHATTAN FIELD, April 15.—The Saspers of Manhattan College had their turn at Capt. The weather, owever, which was dark, threatening and chilly, was probably more of a sause for this than anything else.

It was originally intended and it has been the custom for years for the Jaspers to open the season with the Giants calculations, and as to-day was the only open date before the beginning of the season it was given to them. The collegians have a very strong team this year, but in to-day's game they were badiy handicapped by the loss of the services of Scanlon, their clever first

Outside of that the day was all right for baseball. The grass was green, the sand hard, the base bags soft enough to break a fall and the benches soft as benches usually are.

Two girls with Easter bonnets and Easter smiles, which had not been dimmed by the glory of one day's triumphs, enthroned themselves in the stand long before any one else had arrived. They were of the kind who know a two-base hit from "over the fence is out." and they carried score cards.
